Raincoast

Camber in the daylight catches fire at night

Woodland webs weave light through a soggy ceiling

A festive forest blooms tonight

Everyone, everywhere, looking for something or one, to change

Hopefully, somewhere, it is snowing

Senescence stains, time lost, framed, trapping light for the rocks to breathe

Flying is the aggravated hope of being lifted up, while falling alive

Time wears a thin black coat that even the blind can see

Autumn is here resting in the glow
